Privileged or Personal Material I. I just wanted to pass on some great audio I found on the ADN website from Bobbi Quintavell. In it she says she's excited about what Governor Palin is doing for the state and that she looks forward to watching her leadership evolve. The link is attached, as well as some bio info I found. Just a thought.

Bobbi Quintavell's background

(Published: February 4, 2007)

Age: 45

Hometown: Barrow

Education: Bachelor's in business administration from the University of Alaska Anchorage; completed executive development program at Harvard University.

Job title: Chief executive and president, Arctic Slope Regional Corp.

Career track: North Slope community health aide; village liaison for the North Slope Borough planning department; video production assistant for borough; fuel manager for Eskimo Inc.; executive director of the Arctic Slope Native Association; vice president of corporate relations for Petro Star, Inc.; chief executive of Arctic Slope Construction Holding Co.

Volunteer activities: Include visiting schools and talking to students across the North Slope. She has done this on her own and with Inupiaq dog musher John Baker.

What's in her office: A framed 1920s black-and-white photo of a dog musher and his team traversing through broken ice. The caption in Inupiaq translates to something like, "If you think you have a tough road to follow, just take a look at this guy."

Palin's simply doing the right thing

DAN FAGAN
Comment
(Published: June 24, 2007)

Tony Soprano has nothing on Sarah Palin. A small town hockey mom with the clout of a mob boss. She has the business community nervous, oil companies shaking in their oily boots, politicians terrified.
Have you ever seen anything like it? I haven't.
Let's do a body count. Randy Ruedrich, Gregg Renkes, Jim Clark, Frank Murkowski, John Binkley, The Republican Machine, Andrew Halcro, Tony Knowles, Paul Jenkins, Bill Allen, Voice of the Times, Exxon, BP, Conoco Phillips and, yes, now the Alaska Board of Agriculture and The Alaska Creamery Board. She whacked them all and didn't suffer a scratch.
Barracuda Palin can have you swimming with the fishes, never to be heard from again.
Lisa Murkowski is U.S. senator today because Palin decided not to run against her. But she may still. Lisa, Don and, yes, even Ted, you better hope she feels at home at the mansion. Can you imagine running against her? What do you say, "I am the anti-truth-and-transparency candidate"?
Every time someone challenges this woman something bad happens to them. She slays her foes like the Israelites struck down enemies in the Old Testament. I'm not saying divine intervention is in play, but if you believe in that kind of thing, this would be close.
What is it about Sarah Palin? While she's whacking people left and right she also charms the public and the media. She has more juice than any Alaska politician in recent memory.
How does she do it? Does she have ice flowing through her veins? Is she really that tough, that savvy? Is she calculating, cold blooded, vindictive?
No, the complete opposite. She has a heart of gold.
I met Palin several years ago as a reporter for Channel 2. Typically when you meet politicians as a reporter they rarely acknowledge your photographer. Not so with Palin. I was the one on TV who would interpret her views in front of tens of thousands of people that night. But she focused on my photographer. She was extra friendly to him. I had never seen a politician operate that way. But Palin is not like most politicians.
Her appeal does not come from being nice and personable. Bill Clinton is charming but you wouldn't trust him with your teenage daughter. There is so much more to Palin than charm. She's a good person. We all have faults and I am sure the governor does too. But some folks just have a strong sense of what's right and wrong. Their conscience is stronger than the temptation to take short cuts.
Palin is obsessed with integrity. Through the years my conversations with her almost always centered on the same theme, doing the right thing. Palin is an ideologue and yet practical. She picks her battles and the ones she picks she wins.
The governor believes strongly that Exxon is warehousing our gas. I believe she believes the company has no intention of getting our gas to market anytime soon. I disagree with her. But we may never know if Exxon wanted to build the pipeline now that AGIA has excluded the company from the process. If the governor is right, then AGIA does no harm. But if she is wrong, it could cause major delays in the construction of the pipeline. The verdict is still out.
But we do know this. Whatever gas line plan the governor has adopted, she believes it is best for the state. Her character won't let her do anything else.
We all want to be a person who does the right thing. Someone who takes the high road. Striving to be a better parent, husband, wife, employee, neighbor or friend is what life is all about. We all wish we had more character.

Character is why Sarah Palin has reached a level of power few politicians realize. It comes not from her issues, policies or positions. She didn't get it by bullying, being tough or hard headed. And no it's not her pretty smile. We know when this governor makes a decision, right or wrong, she makes it from the heart. People love that. As well they should.

Governor-the criteria for veto was based on the cabinet discussion around life health safety infrastructure etc. We do not have lists of individual communities too priorities. Some of the larger cities have resolutions or books of projects but not necessarily in priority order. Legislators or the regional delegations get together and decide what goes in.

We need to figure out best we can what top priority/project each local community submitted and try to fund it and no lower priority items - was that criteria used in veto recommendations?

Thank you so much Governor for your kind and thoughtful email. My husband was very touched that you would keep him in your prayers, especially with all that's on your plate! ... and I'm very grateful for your support and prayers.

While this is not something we would have chosen to go through, there are blessings... it is certainly allowing us to stop and smell the roses, and giving us a renewed awareness and appreciation for each other and how blessed we are in our lives.

Again, thank you Governor! And I'm not fretting about work ... its good to keep in the loop and to be in touch with the crew. Please let me know if there's anything you need from me.

Linda

Thanks for your email Linda. I am praying for your hubby - and for strength and peace for you. Even, if possible, joy for you during this trying time. Please don't let me make your life any more stressful than it must be anyway right now.

Truly, just holler if you see Admin do anything that's not by the book - but don't fret about work. Concentrate on your good husband and helping him heal.

You are appreciated!

Sarah

Hello Governor,

You do not need my permission to use the state credit card. We just need to know what you've used the card for to post a charge correctly, and we'll get that information from your secretary or whomever when we need it. Please feel free to check with me anytime you want to, but you certainly aren't required to. You may also just may note what a charge is for on the back of the receipt and have staff send it to us. If you use the card for a personal rather than state or official charge, we will simply request reimbursement when appropriate.

Thank you Governor,

Linda
